This 14-week undergraduate course provides an introduction to the anatomy, physiology, nutrition and behavior of the horse. Management techniques and the practical aspects of horse care (including stabling, shoeing/hoof care, common diseases and emergency care) will be discussed in classroom lectures and extensive notes will be available on-line. Students will further benefit from live demonstrations and hands-on training. In addition to the classroom lectures and demonstrations, optional field trips may be offered throughout the program schedule.

To assist continuing education students who might not be able to regularly travel to New Brunswick, the course has been designed so it may be taken "on-line". As an on-line student, you will have access to all lecture and supplemental information provided to the in-class attendees. In addition there will be two weekly "chat" sessions on-line with Dr. Ralston to discuss the assigned lectures scheduled at a convenient time.

On-line students will also have the ability to participate in field trips and demonstrations – and even the classroom portion of the course – as their schedule permits. If you wish to be able to access the on-line course, you must provide an e-mail address at the time of registration so we can enter you into Rutgers' E-classroom" system. The course notes on the web have many videos and photos. You will need a high speed internet access to fully benefit from them; access using dial-up connections will be very frustrating, if not impossible.

Who Should Attend?

This course is designed for potential horse owners, new horse owners and horse enthusiasts. As an undergraduate course that is extended to continuing education students, a high school diploma is required. If you register as a continuing education student, you will receive 3.6 continuing education units and a certificate, rather than undergraduate college credits.
