Two Days of Practical Hands-On Instruction in the Field

Join Ted Szczawinski, one of the most popular short course instructors at Rutgers, for this hands-on, field-based class to learn quick, easy-to-recall plant ID strategies. Ted will guide you through two days of classroom instruction and interactive field activities to improve your understanding of how plants are grouped, identified, and maintained. Knowing the right plant for the right site begins by mastering the fundamental skill of plant identification! This class also serves a strong foundation for anyone planning to attend the six-day Basics of Plant Materials course in January.

Here's what your colleagues say about Ted's teaching style and outcomes:

"Ted has great ways to remember particular details of what your looking for"

"Awesome instructor, keeps your attention. Ted break things down to help you easily understand"

"Ted tackles tough topics easily and leaves his audience wanting more"

"Ted's the best! He is a true gem and asset for Rutgers"

"Great tips to remember things to help ID plants"
